

PC Recovery Help

My computer erased all of my user data in the midst of a long overdue backup. I found some great recovery software that I can only recommend. It was a lifesaver:

<http://www.data-recovery-software.net/>

Hay Group (Newsletter)

Many of you are certainly familiar with Hay. Their website requires a login for their white papers and other great info. You can also get the quarterly email newsletter. There's a lot of good research done by them.

http://www.haygroup.com/Library/Newsletters/Hay_Insight_Connections.asp

Active Inquiry

Some of you may be familiar with this theory and methodology. It's often used in change management efforts. This is a common site where you can access loads of research papers (downloadable) that provide loads of info and ideas. <http://appreciativeinquiry.cwru.edu/>

Long URL's

Have you ever tried to cut and paste a URL that was soooooo long that you couldn't get it all on one line in a message and people would then have difficulties accessing the link you emailed them? Well, here's your answer: www.digbig.com. You merely cut and paste the URL you'd like to shorten into this website and it generates a new, shorter URL for you to use in your message!

Leadership

The magazine We Lead has a website that has Leadership Tips as well as many other aspects to look at. You can find info about dealing with the workplace bully, Level Five Leadership, how to motivate others, and much more. Under the Archives, you can find more articles: <http://www.leadingtoday.org/>. Check out the other links that they have under the "We LEAD in Learning" subsection.

The Center for Service & Leadership also has a collection of articles on a variety of topics relating to leadership: <http://www.gmu.edu/student/csl/leadtips.html>

Trainers' Network

This website has a section full of resources on a wide variety of topics:

<http://www.trainersnetwork.org/html/resources.html>