

Organizational & Personal Development

This is "a free website for online articles, materials, and resources for innovation and the ethical development of people, business and organizations. Classical and innovative concepts, ideas, theories - quick, simple, free and fun. For sales, management, motivation, training and free team building games for business, organizational development, personal development, coaching staff, and for children's education and development."

<http://www.businessballs.com/>

Risk Management

Not something for leadership trainers, however, it is a great source of information regarding treasury and finance issues. It covers a variety of topics and geographies.

<http://www.gtnews.com>

Reviewing

This is Roger Greenaway's site. He is THE man when it comes to the topic of reviewing. For those of you who may be unfamiliar with that phrase, it means: bringing out responses to experiences in ways that enhance their value, their impact and their benefits. Alternative terms for 'reviewing' are 'debriefing', 'reflection' and 'processing'. I have seen Roger's workshops at the European conference for the Association for Experiential Education (AEE) and he is truly remarkable. He shares a wealth of knowledge with his readers on active approaches to learning and development.

<http://reviewing.co.uk/index.htm>

DDI's Newsletter (Interviewing, Leadership, Development)

DDI (Development Dimensions Inc.) is a global company that was established over 30 years ago and serves over 1,000 different companies. They provide training in a variety of areas and I have first-hand knowledge as a certified trainer of their interviewing skills program (Targeted Selection). You can subscribe to their newsletter ("Directions") free of charge and their website has numerous white pages on an array of topics.

<http://www.ddiworld.com/directions/>